8 March 2018

U.T.SEC 2018: Positive impressions of second edition

The second edition of U.T.SEC – Unmanned Technologies & Security – Expo & Conference concluded on Thursday 8 March 2018 after two successful days. More than 800 trade visitors and congress delegates learned from 24 companies from Germany, Austria and Canada about the use of drones and how to protect against them in security-relevant structures. Three conference panels comprising more than 30 lectures complemented the products and services on offer from the exhibiting companies to create a current snapshot of a growth market. The Bavarian State Ministry for Economic Affairs and Media, Energy and Technology, represented by Under-Secretary Franz Josef Pschierer, once again assumed patronage for the event.

The range of products and services covered by U.T.SEC, as the world's first exhibition focusing on security by and against unmanned technologies, includes unmanned systems, communications, data transmission, positioning, perimeter protection, electronic fencing, optics, optronics, lighting, training, service, resources, technical systems for crisis management, analytical equipment, UAV defence, all kinds of accessories and technical information. The focus of the conference is on both technical and legal aspects relating to the use of, and protection against, drones and other unmanned vehicles in public places, in industry, and in security-related fields. U.T.SEC is supported by UAV DACH e.V., the largest German-language umbrella association for unmanned air transport in Europe, and Verband für Sicherheitstechnik e.V. (VfS, Association for Security Technology).
